PRESS RELEASE

Florida Trust for Historic Preservation Announces, Celebrates 2025 Florida Preservation Award Winners

Tallahassee, Fla.– The Florida Trust for Historic Preservation recognized excellence in historic preservation throughout the state with its 2025 Florida Preservation Awards during the 2025 Preservation on Main Street conference in Fernandina Beach on July 17, 2025.

The awards were conferred along with the Secretary of State Awards, which is an important event at the annual conference. Preservation Award nominations were submitted by the public with recipients selected by a jury comprised of preservationists from around the state.

“We are thrilled to honor the achievements of the 2025 recipients of the Florida Preservation Awards,” said Florida Trust Board President Ennis Davis. “Their commitment to preservation is applaudable and we congratulate everyone involved. It is through efforts like these that we can preserve Florida’s history and heritage.”

Here are this year’s Florida Preservation Award winners, as well as a brief description of the winning projects:

2025 Florida Preservation Awards

Legacy Award

The Legacy Award is the highest honor bestowed by the Florida Trust for Historic Preservation, designated by its Board of Trustees. It honors a person whose life exemplifies the long-term guardianship of Florida's history and heritage through philosophy and actions.

Representative Michelle Salzman

Pensacola, Escambia County

Florida Representative Michelle Salzman has been a dynamic advocate for historic preservation throughout her time in Pensacola and in her role as state representative. Since being elected in 2020 to the Florida House of Representatives, Representative Salzman has been a constant advocate for full funding of the Department of State's historic preservation grants. Securing millions in dollars that go to projects preserving Florida history in every community across the state. The first bill Salzman filed for consideration in Tallahassee was for the creation of a Florida Historic Tax Credit, a vital preservation tool Florida desperately needs. For the past five years, Representative Salzman has kept this bill at the forefront of discussions by the Legislature and has been a tireless champion. Representative Salzman is a strong supporter of the Florida Trust and for historic preservation in the state of Florida.

At home, she continues to advocate and bring attention to the significance of Pensacola and Northwest Florida's historical structures, including forgotten African-American cemeteries and the jewel of downtown Pensacola, the Seville Quarter. Representative Salzman is a lifelong native of Northwest Florida, who is passionate about our unique heritage and fights to preserve it.

President's Award

The President's Award recognizes an individual's lifelong achievements and leadership in state and national preservation arenas and service to the Florida Trust. This individual truly exemplifies working to preserve the past for the future.

Christine Page

St. Petersburg, Pinellas County

Christine Page is passionate about preserving Florida's historic places, and particularly one vital aspect of Florida's unique history: the St. Petersburg Shuffleboard Club. Founded in 1924, the St. Petersburg Shuffleboard Club is the world's largest shuffleboard club and where Christine served as Executive Director of the Shuffleboard Club since 2015 and acted as Board President before that. She is a committed preservationist and has served on numerous preservation boards including the City of St. Petersburg Community Preservation Commission. Her leadership has been recognized with numerous awards, including the Preservation Legacy Award from Preserve the 'Burg and the City of St. Petersburg's Distinguished Citizen Award.

Historic Preservation Scholar

This award recognizes college students in Florida who have demonstrated outstanding dedication and achievement in the field of historic preservation.

Dr. Clarissa Carr

Gainesville, Alachua County

Dr. Clarissa Carr obtained her Ph.D. in Historic Preservation from the University of Florida in 2023. Dr. Carr started her Ph.D courses in 2013, after receiving her bachelor's and master's in interior design from UF, with a certificate in Historic Preservation. She wrote her dissertation on Harry Cline Merritt, a local Gainesville architect that was prominent in the midcentury era but had never fully been celebrated or written about until Dr. Carr's immense original research. She now teaches several courses at the University of Florida as an assistant professor and continues to help the University apply for and administer historic preservation grants.

Hope Evans

Tallahassee, Leon County

Through her academic and professional work, Hope Evans has dedicated herself to preserving our community. Hope graduated from Florida State University with an M.A. in Public History in 2025. Having come to Tallahassee in 2018, she has worked alongside her community to maintain, celebrate, and uplift. Her projects include completing a building history for a site important to Tallahassee's Black community, documenting and researching Railroad Square, and creating design guidelines for the Los Robles historic district. Through her work, she has had the privilege to work with our community, from kindergarten to lifelong learners. She feels that if her work in preservation can give the next generation a sense that their history has always been important, then she will consider herself proud.

Alessio Luna
Tallahassee, Leon County

A first-generation student, Alessio's work focuses on preserving the architectural and historical landmarks that tell the stories of these communities. He graduated from Florida State University with an M.A. in Public History in 2025. His flagship project, Reviving the Heart of Florida, involved preserving the Old Gulf County and New Lafayette County courthouses through extensive research, digital archives and community engagement, ensuring these sites remain accessible and valued. Alessio's contributions include researching mid-century modern architecture, updating historic preservation records, and contributing to various preservation projects across Florida. His leadership at the Florida Trust for Historic Preservation helped shape preservation policies, secure funding, and engage communities to protect historic properties. Alessio's volunteer work and active involvement in organizations like Latinos in Heritage Conservation demonstrate his commitment to expanding preservation efforts within underrepresented communities.

Jacqueline Vanegas
Tallahassee, Leon County

Jacqueline Vanegas graduated with an M.A. in History with a Major in Historical Administration and Public History at Florida State University in 2025. Focused on the intersection of historic preservation, advocacy and community engagement, Jacqueline dedicates herself to helping preserve and save historic spaces in Florida. Her advocacy includes publishing an Op-Ed in the Sun Sentinel defending historic preservation practices and co-presenting at the 2024 POMS conference on balancing coastal resilience with preservation efforts. As a diversity scholar for the National Trust for Historic Preservation's PastForward Conference and volunteer for the APA's D-PRAT program, she is always finding new opportunities to learn and develop to become a better preservationist. Her combination of public outreach, community engagement, and continuous learning envelops what it means to be a dedicated Historic Preservation Scholar

Jacob Winton
Tallahassee, Leon County

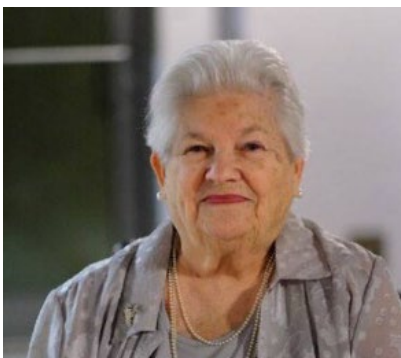

Jacob Winton is an emerging preservation professional who graduated with his MA in U.S. History and Public History from Florida State University in May 2025. His passion is to work with underrepresented communities to help preserve their histories through the built environment. Jacob has actively worked in historic preservation inside and outside of the classroom, including interning with the Tallahassee Trust for Historic Preservation and the Limestone County Archives. He has presented his research at conferences such as the 2025 Florida Conference of Historians. He wrote the nomination for St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church for inclusion on the Tallahassee- Leon County Local Register of Historic Places. He served as Project Manager of a StoryMap outlining the history of Railroad Square and the issues it currently faces, and he was influential in advocating for Railroad Square to be one of the Florida Trust for Historic Preservation’s 11 to Save in 2024.

Individual Distinguished Service

This award honors a career dedicated to preserving Florida’s history and heritage and is intended for individuals who have clearly made an impact in their community through their efforts as a preservation activist, advocate or leader.

Frances “Dolly” MacIntyre
DeLand, Volusia County

Frances “Dolly” MacIntyre of Coral Gables has spent nearly 60 years advocating to save our state’s special places. In 1966, her involvement in historic preservation began with the effort to save the historic Douglas Entrance in Coral Gables from demolition. In 1978, she was a founding member of the Florida Trust for Historic Preservation. In addition, she was a charter member of The Villagers, a nonprofit women’s organization that became Miami Dade County’s first historic preservation organization. This experience led to a lifelong passion for saving historic sites. Over the years, she held many elected offices and committee positions. Programs she developed with The Villagers include the establishment of a program that helps to provide repairs to historic sites, and a scholarship program to provide funding to send elected officials, public administrators or educators to workshops or seminars on topics related to historic preservation. The Villagers provide scholarships statewide to college students in the field of historic preservation and allied subjects. Dolly now serves as a mentor to members as they grow in their knowledge and experience as preservationists.

Master Artisan

This award recognizes individuals in Florida who use traditional techniques or methods to achieve authenticity in the restoration of historical resources.

Cody Clark

Geneva, Seminole County

Cody Clark, vice president of Olde World Walls & Ceilings, has been awarded Master Artisan in recognition of his exceptional craftsmanship and dedication to preserving historic buildings. With over 15 years of experience in the masonry trade, specializing in plaster and historic restoration, Cody's work reflects his passion for authenticity and his commitment to using traditional techniques and materials. His expertise has contributed to the successful restoration of numerous historic properties across Florida and the Southeast, including Bunnell City Hall and the Adderley House in the Florida Keys. This recognition highlights Cody's relentless pursuit of excellence and his ability to bring historic structures back to life with precision and integrity. His skill and dedication to preserving architectural heritage makes him stand out in the field of historic restoration.

Roy E. Graham Award for Excellence in Historic Preservation Education

Named in memory of Roy Eugene Graham, FAIA, historic preservation architect, educator, Beinecke-Reeves Distinguished Professor and Director of the Historic Preservation Program at the University of Florida College of Design, Construction and Planning, this award recognizes professional educators who have made a long-term contribution to the field of historic preservation education, ensuring future generations will continue to preserve Florida's extraordinary history and heritage.

Dr. Kathleen Powers Conti

Tallahassee, Leon County

Dr. Kathleen Powers Conti is an established historic preservationist and architectural historian who joined the history faculty at Florida State University in 2022 where she serves as an assistant professor in history. She has consulted on more than 150 projects in 45 states and brings this breadth of experience into the classroom. She has already attained a national reputation and is transforming the way that preservation and architectural history are taught both in Florida and beyond. She has added several new courses to FSU's catalogue and expanded opportunities for students to get first-hand experience preserving Florida's history and cultural heritage. She frequently consults for the National Park Service, such as developing new interpretation for Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birth home and Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta.

Volunteer of the Year

This award recognizes an individual volunteer who has made significant contributions to the preservation and promotion of Florida’s cultural heritage.

Al Michejda

Winter Park, Orange County

Al Michejda is a dedicated volunteer and passionate advocate for The Plaza Live, one of Orlando’s oldest theaters. As a retired architect, he has served as the project manager in the several phases of renovation and restoration of The Plaza Live and served as a Board member. In September 2024, The Plaza Live completed a transformative $10 million renovation of The Main Hall performing space and lobby. After the historic Plaza Live Spire fell into disrepair over the years and the original marquee signage no longer was lit with the classic neon lights, he oversaw the historic renovation of the iconic spire and marquee. He was instrumental in engaging donors, corporations, and community groups to feel engaged in the historic preservation of The Plaza Live and inspired a broader understanding and appreciation of the arts and culture history of Central Florida.

Archaeology

This award category recognizes a significant archaeological project, such as a physical site investigation, excavation and resulting report, the interpretation of a site or the creation of educational opportunities and access to the archaeological site.

Multi-Area Cultural Resource Assessment

Gulf, Osceola, Hernando, Hendry and Sarasota Counties

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission conducted a cultural resource reconnaissance. FWC authorized this investigation to better manage archaeological and historical sites under state ownership by obtaining information on cultural resources under agency control. Stantec led the work and conducted a reconnaissance to provide data on known sites, to map additional resources, and to guide future predictions about unrecorded resources. Ultimately, the reconnaissance will inform cultural resource management decisions and lead to protection of cultural resources.

Preservation Communications/Media

This award recognizes outstanding communications for heritage education programs, including books, brochures, curricula, DVDs, websites, interactive media and other publications that deal with historic preservation, archaeology or local history.

History and Culture Trail

Tallahassee, Leon County

The History and Culture Trail in Tallahassee is a multiuse path built over a formerly dangerous stormwater ditch. It provides green space to the central urban area of Tallahassee and connects Tallahassee’s historical Southside neighborhoods to two preeminent universities, Florida State University and Florida Agriculture and Mechanical University, downtown, and a vibrant commercial and residential district. The multiuse path promotes active transportation, while simultaneously celebrating the underrepresented history of the neighborhoods, businesses, and people living in the surrounding area.

Florida Main Street Communities Photography Project

Statewide

Over a period of four months in 2024, Mark Krancer of Kram Kran Photo traveled to 53 different Florida Main Street communities, photographically documenting properties of historic and cultural relevance specific to those communities. Aerial imagery, downtown beautification, preservation, events and marketing photos were all incorporated to ensure the communities received maximum benefit for their community’s specific needs. Creating a cohesive statewide level of high quality photographs has ensured consistency in marketing imagery. These photos have been used for marketing purposes on a local and statewide level, as well as added to the Florida Master Site file for historic preservation and future research purposes.

Restoration, Rehabilitation or Adaptive Use

This award recognizes best practices for the restoration, rehabilitation or adaptive use of a building, complex of buildings or a district. This category may include residential, commercial, governmental, educational and institutional projects, both for individual buildings or historic districts.

Outstanding Achievement

Historic Peacock Lodge

Port St. Lucie, St. Lucie County

The Historic Peacock Lodge is a vernacular wood framed board and batten sided building, originally serving as a hunting lodge for the 4,614-acre Peacock Ranch. The building is notable due to the scarcity of extant buildings of this type and its use of indigenous materials, such as old growth pine used for framing and flooring, in addition to extensive use of locally sourced cypress used as siding, interior wallboard and interior ceilings. Preservation work was done by New World Builders, Inc. The City of Port St. Lucie, by choosing to preserve this building, has contributed to the general awareness of its history and has provided an authentic restoration of this historic resource to house the records presented by the Port St. Lucie Historical Society and provide historic context to its visitors. The Historic Peacock Lodge represents the time just prior to the massive growth that continues to this day as Port St. Lucie continues to develop.

Rogers Kiene Building

Orlando, Orange County

The historic Rogers Kiene Building is the oldest building in downtown Orlando. Built in 1886 is one of the few examples of Queen Anne style architecture in Central Florida and was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1983. In 2021, KMF Architects was contracted to perform a historical assessment to reroof and update HVAC systems. The team designed internal structural supports that were invisible to inhabitants, applied a new three-ply bit roof, and designed a lighter, more efficient HVAC system. The project required creative solutions for the recreation of three notable historic elements: an iconic corner turret with handmade metal shingles, a pediment sculpture and an acroterion. The restoration of the Rogers Kiene Building ensures that this beautiful historic building continues to be enjoyed for decades to come by both residents and visitors alike.

St. Joseph Neighborhood Center
St. Augustine, St. Johns County

The St. Joseph Neighborhood Center, located in the heart of the Lincolnville National Register Historic District, formerly called the 1898 St. Benedict the Moor Schoolhouse, is the community's oldest surviving Black school and oldest brick school building. The transformation of this severely-deteriorated, long-vacant structure into the St. Joseph Neighborhood Center brought a vibrant new use to an extraordinary historic structure and emphasized a true commitment to the reuse of historic materials. Furthermore, the careful and deliberate effort to present the stories of the people associated with St. Benedict's resulted in preservation of the first chapter of the property's history in a place that is meeting current and future community needs. Additionally, this project's completion heralds the upcoming 150th year, in 2026, of the Sisters of St. Joseph's commitment to serving the St. Augustine community.

Historic Delray Beach Seaboard Air Line Train Depot
Delray Beach, Palm Beach County

The historic 1927 Delray Beach Seaboard Air Line Train Depot's recent restoration included a complete restoration of the interior and exterior including all new mechanical, plumbing, and electrical systems. The project was done by R.J. Heisenbottle Architects. The structure was analyzed for problems resulting from fire damage. The firm was responsible for designing and preparing construction documents for the interior build out of the structure to prepare it for its new use as a small health clinic and City of Delray Beach office space. Exterior renovations include a partial restoration of exterior walls and some new exterior walls and roofs have been added to accommodate the building's new use. The site was designed to accommodate new parking, site lighting and landscaping with historically appropriate details and materials. Additional on-site improvements include site walk connectivity for pedestrians and cyclists.

121 Kings Ferry Way
St. Augustine, St. Johns County

Elaine and Duke Darnold undertook the rehabilitation of 121 Kings Ferry Way in the Lincolnville, neighborhood of St. Augustine. The building, dating to around 1890, is part of Lincolnville's historic district. After purchasing the deteriorated property in 2019, they spent four years restoring it using in-kind materials and designed to withstand flooding. The project involved extensive structural repairs and high-level craftsmanship, particularly from Duke, recognized as a master artisan. Despite obstacles, the restoration preserved the building's architectural and historical significance. The project retained historic character with the help of local property tax exemptions and demonstrated community recognition for preserving Lincolnville's cultural heritage.

Union Terminal Warehouse
Jacksonville, Duval County

The Union Terminal Warehouse in Jacksonville was constructed in 1913. Over time, the building fell into disrepair. Columbia Ventures purchased it in 2018 and pursued historic preservation and adaptation of the building with historic tax credits. Dasher Hurst Architects guided the restoration and design while Winter Park Construction completed the construction of the renovation, which began in 2023. Precast concrete structural elements were restored on the exterior, and a new window system designed concurrently with the National Parks Service was installed to match historic elements. The interior restoration and renovation work featured historic barn doors, freight elevators, fire doors, and historic warehouse bays. Although the building had sat in disrepair for decades, by the beginning of 2025 it was beautifully restored. A once dim part of Jacksonville has been re-illuminated with this restoration.

Sydonie Mansion
Zellwood, Orange County

The Sydonie Mansion, located in Mount Dora, was built in 1893 and in 1903, it was renovated by renowned architect Grosvenor Atterbury in the style of Mediterranean Revival. This historic preservation project was undertaken by Saint Vincent Master Roofers. Saint Vincent guided the restoration of the Sydonie Mansion's roof by preserving and recycling 70 percent of the 4,200 Ludowici French tiles. Balancing these constraints required.

Flagler Museum’s Whitehall Dining Room Restoration

Palm Beach, Palm Beach County

The restoration of Flagler Museum’s Whitehall Dining Room is a significant achievement for the Flagler Museum, showcasing their dedication to historical authenticity and preservation. Originally designed by Pottier & Stymus, the room featured rare West Indian satinwood, was once used to entertain prominent figures. However, after Whitehall was converted into a hotel in 1925, the room was darkened, obscuring the satinwood. In 2018, after years of searching, the dining suite was returned to Whitehall. During restoration, it was discovered that the woodwork was satinwood, not mahogany as previously believed. In 2024, conservators F. Carey Howlett and Chris Mills led the restoration, carefully removing the stain, preserving carvings, and replacing missing sections with reversible materials. The ceiling was also restored with gilded details and wood-graining techniques replicated. By September 2024, the room was fully restored, returning it to its original brilliance.

Historic Raney School House

Tallahassee, Leon County

The Raney School House restoration project aims to preserve and revitalize this historically significant structure, ensuring its longevity and continued contribution to the community. A comprehensive preservation effort led by MLD Architects includes structural stabilization, exterior and interior restoration, and modern safety upgrades, all executed with a commitment to historical accuracy. Key improvements include reinforcing the foundation, repairing original wood siding and windows, restoring interior millwork and flooring, and integrating essential electrical, plumbing, and fire suppression systems while maintaining the building’s historic charm. Additionally, accessibility enhancements, site improvements, and meticulous documentation will ensure the schoolhouse remains a valuable educational and cultural landmark. By blending preservation with necessary modernization, this project safeguards the schoolhouse’s architectural heritage, allowing it to serve future generations as a tangible link to the past.

Union Bank Museum
Tallahassee, Leon County

The restoration of the Union Bank Museum ensured the preservation of one of Florida’s oldest surviving bank buildings. The restoration was led by MLD Architects and focused on maintaining the structure’s historic integrity while addressing critical preservation needs, including thermal and moisture protection, wood repair, and plaster and drywall restoration. The firm also oversaw improvements to the building’s exterior, enhancing durability and longevity. Through careful planning and execution, the project successfully balanced historical accuracy with modern preservation standards, safeguarding this landmark for future generations.

Historic Franklin County Courthouse
Apalachicola, Franklin County

The Franklin County Courthouse, a distinguished Neo-Classical Revival structure built in 1940 as a Works Progress Administration project, has long served as a cornerstone of justice and governance in Apalachicola. Listed on the National Register of Historic Places as a contributing building in the Apalachicola Historic District, the courthouse sustained significant damage from Hurricane Michael in 2018, including critical structural and water intrusion issues. MLD Architects was entrusted with the task of restoring the courthouse to its original grandeur while ensuring it remained a resilient and operational facility for the county. Meticulous care was taken to repair damaged stonework, address waterproofing failures, and implement extensive cleaning and restoration efforts to preserve the building’s original character. Every restoration decision was made with a commitment to maintaining the integrity of the building envelope, honoring the courthouse’s architectural significance, and safeguarding it for future generations.

Raney House Museum
Apalachicola, Franklin County

The Raney House Museum, an elegant Greek Revival residence completed in 1838, stands as one of Apalachicola's most significant historic landmarks. Constructed during the city's golden era as a major cotton port. The Raney House is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and serves as a museum operated by the Apalachicola Historical Society, offering a tangible link to the region's antebellum past and maritime legacy. MLD Architects carried out essential preservation work on this iconic structure, focusing on protecting and extending the life of its historic building envelope. With care and sensitivity to its architectural character, the team addressed deteriorating exterior conditions and reinforced structural elements while preserving the home's distinctive features, including its Doric-columned portico, original woodwork, and 19th-century fenestration. Modern materials and methods were judiciously introduced to provide long-term resilience against coastal weather while remaining visually and historically appropriate.

St. Paul AME Church
Apalachicola, Franklin County

The restoration of St. Paul AME Church focused on preserving its historic integrity while enhancing durability and performance. MLD Architects led the project which included the complete removal and replacement of the steep-slope main roof, installing a high-temperature waterproofing underlayment and a new standing seam aluminum roofing system designed to withstand 150 mph winds. Structural repairs were made to deteriorated wood decking, fascia, and trim, ensuring a sound foundation. The team also designed new storm shutters for added protection. An additional restoration effort addressed the north-facing historic stained-glass window system, carefully removing and replacing deteriorated wood components while reglazing and repainting the windows to match their original condition. Through meticulous planning and expert craftsmanship, St. Paul AME Church remains a lasting landmark for generations to come.

H. George Fink Office and Studio Coral Gables, Miami-Dade County

The H. George Fink Office and Studio, constructed in 1925, is an outstanding example of Mediterranean Revival architecture. Artfully blending elements of Gothic, Moorish, Byzantine, and Italianate design, it is often cited as the best example of Mediterranean Revival architecture in Coral Gables. Remarkably, the finely detailed historic interiors of the building are largely intact. It was designed by architect H. George Fink, an original member of City Founder George Merrick's design team, to be his office and studio, showcasing not only his architectural prowess, but the vision that Merrick had for the city. This preservation project, undertaken by the City of Coral Gables, was a comprehensive interior and exterior restoration of the Fink Studio. It included cleaning and repairs of the cast stone elements and ironwork on the façade, restoration of decorative interior finishes including painted surfaces and terracotta inlaid floor tile, restoration of the original Venetian wood windows, screens, and gates, and replication of lost original features. After the restoration, the building stands revitalized and renewed.

DeSoto County Historic Court House Arcadia, DeSoto County

The DeSoto County Historic Court House, a century-old landmark, underwent a meticulous restoration to preserve its historical integrity. Led by REG Architects, key exterior repairs included replacing the roof, restoring deteriorated brickwork, and addressing damage to limestone, cast stone, and terracotta elements. The project also involved reinforcing the structure with fiberglass rods, historically replicating missing or damaged ornamental features, and ensuring the mortar and finishes matched the original design. The restoration was driven by strong community support, with local judges and residents supportive of this restoration. Today, the courthouse continues to serve as a vital administrative hub for the County, standing as a testament to the successful preservation of a significant historic structure.

Old City Hall in Key West
Key West, Monroe County

The Old City Hall in Key West stands as a defining piece of the city’s heritage. Built in 1892 and nationally recognized as a contributing structure in the Key West Historic District, it has served many roles, from city commission chambers to a visitor center. Despite extensive rot, termite damage, and salt-air exposure, its original windows were carefully restored rather than replaced. Window restoration was completed in just four months by Austin Historical. This project preserved key character-defining features of Old City Hall, blending historical accuracy with modern craftsmanship. The meticulous attention to detail ensures the building’s authenticity remains intact for future generations. By reviving one of Key West’s most recognizable landmarks, the restoration underscores the value of safeguarding historic resources and exemplifies the power of preservation to honor the past while serving the community’s present and future needs.

Meritorious Achievement

Henry E. Kinney Tunnel
Fort Lauderdale, Broward County

The rehabilitation of the 1960 National Register eligible Henry E. Kinney Tunnel, the first tunnel constructed in the state, was a project with statewide implications for historic preservation. The rehabilitation of the tunnel, located in downtown Fort Lauderdale, was led by the Florida Department of Transportation. FDOT met several challenges including the complexity of its location in a major downtown area and addressing safety needs of the City of Fort Lauderdale. As part of the project a four-panel interpretive installation was placed near the Stranahan House Museum and the tunnel was documented with large format photography. The successful rehabilitation of the tunnel will ensure its preservation for another sixty years.
